TESLA'S NEW IDEAS ABOUT ELECTRICITY.

As stated yesterday, Nikola Tesla, the electrician, describes in the Electrical Review a possibility in electric power transmission. His invention for transmitting electricity at high pressure over long distances has been successfully applied at many natural sources of power. Probably the most important of these plants in the United States is at Niagara Falls, costing over $6,000,000 to install, which supplies electricity to many large factories, and supplies electric power for running the trolley lines of the city of Buffalo, twenty-six miles distant. The announcement is now made that, by employing apparatus which he had invented, capable of generating electrical pressure easily in excess of any heretofore used, located at natural sources of power, the current can be conducted to a terminal maintained at an elevation where the rarified atmosphere is capable of conducting freely the particular current produced; then at a distant point where the energy is to be used, a terminal of about the same elevation to attract and receive the current, and to convey it to earth through a special means for transforming and utilizing it.

With the article an illustration is presented showing streams of electricity issuing from a single terminal, giving an estimated electrical pressure of two and a half million volts. The Electrical Review comments upon Mr. Tesla's novel and startling ideas as follows:

"Tesla now proposes to transmit, without the use of any wires, through the natural media—the earth and the air—great amounts of power to distances of thousands of miles. This will appear a dream—a tale from the Arabian Nights. But the extraordinary discoveries Tesla has made during a number of years of incessant labor, which are authoritatively described in our present issue, make it evident that his work in this field has passed a stage of laboratory experiment, and is ready for a practical test on an industrial scale. The success of his efforts means that power from such sources as Niagara will become available in any part of the world, regardless of distance."

WHEN SUFFERING FROM A COLD
old-fashioned remedies generally suffice for those who know how to doctor it. A mustard foot bath, a little hot whiskey, rock and rye, quinine, or CHERLEY COUGH CURE will generally answer the purpose. This is an old-fashioned remedy, put up in modern style. We have sold it for thirty years, and it does what it claims to do—it cures.
